

Presentation of Null Island

It's the name of a location close to the intersection of the prime meridian and the equator.

It's located in international waters in the Atlantic Ocean of the Gulf of Guinea, off the west African coast.

It corresponds to the coordinates (0, 0) in the WGS84 datum. At this location there is a buoy. The name is both a joke and based on the hypothesis existence of an island at this point. As well, it's link to databases placenames to ease finding them.
